

Dear applicants;

As widely reported in the media, there have been growing concerns over the spread of the new coronavirus infection in Japan. The Graduate School of International Cultural Studies has decided to take the following measure for the upcoming entrance examination to be held on February 14, 2020.

If it turns out that you are infected with the new coronavirus and have symptoms of the infection, you cannot take the examination. In that case (or in the case where you cannot enter Japan due to the Japanese government's quarantine measures), we will refund you the examination fee you have paid to us. In that case, please contact the Academic Affairs Office by February 14. To receive a refund, you may be asked to submit a medical certificate issued by your medical institute.

If you are well and take the examination, we would like to ask you to wear a mask during the examination to prevent potential transmission of infectious diseases. Even before the examination, please be advised to take precautions including washing your hands and gargling regularly and wearing a mask.

Sincerely,

The Academic Affairs Office
